Throughout European and American history, students of the martial arts have come together to train -- in German Fechtschulen, London Maisters of Defence, salles d'armes of old New Orleans, and on up to modern storefront dojo. Here we combine traditional European and American techniques with Oriental combinations into a coherent and powerful system for personal defense in 21st-century America. This class will include empty-hand and weapons defenses against armed and unarmed attackers. Participants should be at least 18 years of age, and relatively fit.

Supplies/Equipment: Wear comfortable workout clothing, including long-sleeved heavy-duty sweatshirt and gym shoes. Men should wear a cup. Showers and lockers will be available.

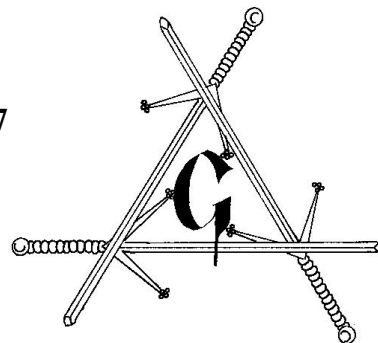

Allen Reed brings together well over 20 years experience in law enforcement, Oriental and European martial arts. He is a firearms, baton and police combatives instructor for a Federal agency; and a State of Illinois certified defensive tactics instructor. He ranks as Kaiden (7th dan equivalent) in Paracombatives Jujutsu, which he has taught at Northwestern University's Jujutsu Club. Allen also researches and recreates the martial arts of Medieval and Renaissance Europe. He has trained with the Chicago Swordplay Guild, the Society for Creative Anachronism, and with many of the world-renowned experts in the field. He teaches Historical Fencing at Highland Community College, and has been Head Instructor at Gallowglass Academy since 2002.
